ELECTRICAL INSTALLATION CONDITION REPORTS

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW

WHAT IS AN EICR?

An EICR is an Electrical Installation Condition Report - also known as a periodic inspection - and it helps ensure the safety and condition of the electrical wiring in the property. If there are any faults present, an EICR will pick them up.

WHAT DOES AN EICR PERIODIC INSPECTION INCLUDE?

+ WHY DO YOU NEED AN EICR?

- Over half of accidental domestic fires in the UK are caused by electricity and you should have your electrics checked periodically to ensure installations have not degraded.
- If you have just moved house and you aren't sure on the condition of the electrics in your home, an EICR is the quickest way to ensure there are no faults.
- Your home insurance may specify that you must be able to prove your home is electrically safe, and this can be done with an EICR. Failure to do so, could invalidate your insurance.
- Landlords should do their best to ensure their property is electrically safe, by having an EICR carried out on their property every 5 years or at the end of tenancy.
- Landlords in Scotland are required by law to guarantee that their property is electrically safe for tenants, and be able to provide proof. This proof is obtained through an EICR.

HOW MUCH DOES AN EICR COST?

The cost of an EICR depends on many factors, including:

- Location
- Age of property
- Size of property
- Extent of testing required

It is highly recommended you have a EICR periodic inspection carried out every 10 years in domestic properties and for rental properties every 5 years or at the change of tenancy.
